Europe accounts porcine areas of high concentration. This spatial distribution has many advantages, but also leads to significant challenges for the environment protection that farmers should answer. Opportunities exist to turn these challenges into circular economy, through new technologies for animal housing, processing and recycling of nutrients. Through the examples of six regions, this forum provides an exchange of practical experiences relating to the recovery of effluents and emissions reduction.